Forecast For London & Southeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Sunday 30 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Plenty of warm sunshine today. Low cloud lingering on coasts.

Today:
Any fog patches soon clearing, with low cloud retreating back to the coast, leaving a good deal of sunshine for most. Widely warm, but it will feel cooler along the east coast, where low cloud and mist may persist. Maximum temperature 23 deg C (73 deg F).

Tonight:
A dry night, with some clear spells inland. Low cloud will drift back in off the North Sea overnight. A cooler night in some rural areas under clearer spells. Minimum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Monday:
Another fine and dry day, with plenty of strong sunshine. Early low cloud retreating back to the east coast. A warm day for most, but feeling cooler on east coast. Maximum temperature 24 deg C (75 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Fine and dry with warm sunny spells Tuesday and Wednesday. Low cloud drifting in from the North Sea overnight, clearing by day. Rain band moving northeast on Thursday, turning fresher.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.